
Results of the national demonstration trials with jowar on farmers' fields are discussed.
The paper suggests that by adopting the soil and water conservation measures along with an improved package of practices developed, the sorghum yields in the area could be enhanced by three to four times of the present yield levels.