
Under dryland conditions as prevailing in black soils of Bellary (Karnataka) region, runoff water was used for supplemental irrigation to jowar crop at critical stages of growth. Application of 12 to 13 cm of runoff water increased grain yield by 150-250% while use of 19 cm of water increased the yield by 450% as compared to control.